

True information on how to safely and correctly use wide-spread technology (such as smart phones, wi-fi, Bluetooth etc) so far utilized as safe, should be widely and heavily distributed through mass media, in schools and work places.

Exposure limits regulation should protect the health of the population and actually be based on real long-term studies and reports on the biological effects of the different radiations and frequencies.