MICRO WAVE NEWS

A Report on Non-Ionizing Radiation

"WiFi Should We Be Worried?"

December 11, 2006

Electrical sensitivity continues to be a controversial subject. But as the number of WiFi hot spots multiplies, the press is paying more attention to the possibility that it may be a real condition. A good example is Nicki Daniels's piece, "WiFi Should We Be Worried?", in today's London Times. Be sure to read it to the end so you don't miss Poppy Rhodes's case history, "I Felt Dizzy and Nauseous."

WiFi, EHS, London Times,

© Copyright Microwave News 2003-2026. All Rights Reserved.