"Men's Health" on Cell Phone Risks

April 14, 2010

Men's Health has gotten into the act too. The May issue offers its take on cell phone radiation health risks with "Is Your Life on the Line?" by Paul Scott. He covers much of the same ground as Nathaniel Rich in Harper's —except his is shorter. Like Rich, Scott begins with the story of Lloyd Morgan, a brain tumor survivor and cell phone activist, who, Scott says, "has made it his mission to spread the message that cell phone radiation is carcinogenic."

Scott leans towards believing that there may well be a brain tumor risk, but tries to stick to the center. His editors, on the other hand, are playing both sides. In a separate post, Men's Health lists the question as a phony health scare. That verdict is based on the opinion of John Moulder, who has long served as an industry consultant (see "Radiation Research and the Cult of Negative Studies").

Unlike Harper's, Men's Health gives Internet readers free access; Harper's wants you to subscribe first.

Men's Health, brain tumors, cell phones, Harper's Magazine, John Moulder, © Copyright Microwave News 2003-2026. All Rights Reserved.

Search

Microwave News The Web

Return to Main Article Archive

VIEW ARTICLES BY YEAR

2026 Articles
2025 Articles
2024 Articles
2023 Articles
2022 Articles
2021 Articles
2020 Articles
2019 Articles
2018 Articles
2017 Articles
2016 Articles
2015 Articles
2014 Articles
2013 Articles
2012 Articles
2011 Articles
2010 Articles
2009 Articles
2008 Articles
2007 Articles
2006 Articles
2005 Articles
2004 Articles

Help Support
Microwave News