Brief Comment

PG&E installed a Smart Meter April 2009. About 2011, I started to feel sick. My joints in the hands and lower back pain began to hurt, I had numbness in my lower legs. I also started to have bloody nose bouts when I would go in the kitchen or living room where the Smart Meter was located on the other side of the wall. In 2012, I had the chance to Opt-Out from the Smart Meter program and DID Opt-Out. About 2-months later my symptoms began to go, and I am feeling much better than the last two years. The Wi-Fi that this Smart Meter puts out is way over the top for the people that live in their homes 24 hours a day.
