Brief Comment

As a health care provider I see clients on a daily basis that experience chronic health problems from their exposure to Radio Frequencies that the FCC claims are safe. I am stunned and confused that the FCC continues to ignore the emerging science on this issue. There are thousands of studies to date that show a direct impact on our biology from these frequencies. The FCC must acknowledge that the biological impact stems from mechanisms other than the simple 'thermal effect.' The agency must employ independent scientists to adequately evaluate the data. No one is immune from these biological effects, it will impact each one of us. The agency has a responsibility to adequately evaluate the INDEPENDENT research. This is your job. Please make sure that independent scientists are responsible for making conclusions and recommendations based on their area of expertise. These exposure are not safe. Please do your due diligence to protect the people you serve, including your own children and grandchildren.
